The Project for the modernization of Tanzania Customs administration

Q2: CASE STORY ABSTRACT
The three year project to modernize Tanzania customs system was supported by Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA) from 2011 to 2013 at a total cost of USD 3,260,000. The project was designed to move away from manual customs screening and tracking of cargo and move towards automated screening and tracking. Geared for the efficient facilitation of cargo management and customs procedures, the project's objectives were set to strengthen Tanzania customs administration and e-government capacity, to increase revenue and cargo management efficiency and to strengthen cargo management transparency.

The Tanzania's cargo and risk management system was analyzed and the New Customs System (NCS) was developed and enabled automatic cargo tracking and customs process, reduced customs clearance time, increased tax levy and improved business process. The ex post evaluation has shown that the project is well on its way to sustainable management as long as the Tanzania's national policy and training programmes continuous to follow up. Overall, the project has exceeded its goals and objectives.
Q3: LONG DESCRIPTION OF THE CASE STORY

- The three year project to modernize Tanzania customs system was supported by Korea International Cooperation Agency from 2011 to 2013 at a total cost of USD3,260,000. The project was designed to move away from manual customs screening and tracking of cargo and move towards automated screening and tracking. Geared for the efficient facilitation of cargo management and customs procedure, three objectives for the project were set. The first one was to strengthen Tanzania customs administration and e-government capacity, the second was to increase revenue and cargo management efficiency and the third was to strengthen cargo management transparency.

- The scope of the project included the analysis of Tanzania's cargo and risk management system and the development of New Customs System (NCS) which enables the cargo tracking, reduction in customs clearance time, increase in tax levy and improvement in business process. In addition, the NCS would provide less difficulties when linking it to the neighbouring state's customs system will be necessary in the future. The project's scope also includes the dispatching of Korean customs administration experts and cargo and risk management experts, the invitation of Tanzania officials in charge of cargo and risk management and ICT operations for training, and the provision of equipments among other measures.

- Supported by the strong political commitment of Tanzania government to modernize its cargo and risk management system, the project was well in line with the its national development priority.

- The implementation process of NCS accompanied the customs regulation and process reform, standardization and computerization of customs administration and strengthening of Tanzania government's risk and cargo management capacity. The ex post evaluation has shown that the project is well on its way to sustainable management as long as the Tanzania's national policy and training programmes continuous to follow up. Overall, the project has exceeded its goals and objectives.
