

Annamaria Lusardi is professor of economics at Dartmouth College and a visiting scholar at Harvard Business School. She has taught at Dartmouth College, Princeton University, the University of Chicago Public Policy School and the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business. She is a member of the Technical Review Committee for the Bureau of Labor Statistics' National Longitudinal Surveys Program, and a member of the Scientific Committee of the Center for Research on Pensions and Welfare Policies (CeRP), Turin, Italy. Dr. Lusardi's main area of research are saving, Social Security and pensions, financial literacy and financial education, and entrepreneurship. Dr. Lusardi has won numerous research awards. Among them is a research fellowship from the Irving B. Harris Graduate School of Public Policy Studies at the University of Chicago, a faculty fellowship from the John. M. Olin Foundation, and a junior and senior faculty fellowship from Dartmouth College. Together with Olivia Mitchell, she is the recipient of the Fidelity Pyramid Prize, awarded to authors of published applied research that best helps address the goal of improving lifelong financial well-being for Americans. Dr. Lusardi holds a Ph.D. degree in Economics from Princeton University and a B.A. in Economics from Bocconi University, Milan, Italy.