Government at a Glance

Purpose

To collect comparable data and indicators of good government and efficient public services, and to provide robust empirics with which to assess the impact of public management reforms and progress made in their implementation.

Objectives and outputs

The second edition of "Government at a Glance" will be released in 2011. It will include measures of both the market and non-market activities of government and for selected indicators of government-owned enterprises. Data are based on general government/public sector labour statistics ; on detailed information from general government national accounts (investments, public corporations, supply and use tables) and information collected by GOV surveys on governance as well data collected on government outputs and outcomes by CTP, EDU, ELSA. The second publication will include indicators on public finance and economics, public sector employment; HRM; compensation for key public sector occupations ; regulatory governance; transparency in governance; service delivery and will also add output and outcome measures for selected policy sectors and functions.

Non-member countries involved in the activity:

Ukraine

Main Developments for 2011

General aspects:

In 2011 the main priorities are finalizing the existing data sets and start the development of new indicators for Government at a Glance 2013 focusing on service delivery, rule of law and better indicators for the implementation and results of various public management and governance practices.

Management in Government

Purpose

To collect comparable data and indicators of good government and efficient public services, and to provide robust empirics with which to assess the impact of public management reforms and progress made in their implementation.

Objectives and outputs

The second edition of "Government at a Glance" will be released in 2011. It will include measures of both the market and non-market activities of government and government-owned enterprises. In addition it will also measure other activities which are undertaken outside of general government but which are wholly or partly funded by government. Data are based on general government labour statistics and on detailed information from general government national accounts (investments, public corporations, supply and use tables) and information collected by GOV surveys on governance and public output processes and their results. The second publication will include six categories of variables: revenues; inputs; public sector processes; and antecedents or constraints that contextualize government performance and will also add output and outcome measures for the "whole of government", for selected policy sectors and for the machinery of government.

Non-member countries involved in the activity:

Brazil, China, India, Indonesia, Russian Federation, South Africa

Main Developments for 2011

General aspects:

The main priorities are developing new indicators for the second edition of Government at a Glance and the development of a strategy in the long run for new data collection, including more measures about the quality of public sector processes and selected output and outcome measures.
