

Marc LeBrun

Acting Director General, Human Resources and Social Development Canada

Marc LeBrun is the Director General responsible for the Canada Education Savings Program, the federal government program that provides grants to encourage Canadian families to save for their children's future post-secondary education. He is also responsible for the management and delivery of the Canada Learning Bond, Canada's newest asset-based program designed to kick-start savings habit in low-income families. Over the years, Marc has developed extensive experience in asset-based social policy, in communications and outreach to vulnerable groups, as well as in financial capability.

Prior to joining the Canada Education Savings Program, Marc worked in various departments including the Canada Revenue Agency and the Canadian Border Services Agency.

Marc is a strong proponent of lifelong learning and has recently completed his MBA at Queen's University. Marc is married and is the father of two lovely daughters.
