First meeting of the OECD Steering Group on Evaluation and Incentives Policies

26-27 March 2009, Mexico City

On 26-27 March, 2009, the OECD Steering Group on Evaluation and Incentives Policies in Mexico celebrated its first meeting in Mexico City. The key outcomes of the Steering Group were (1) the finalisation of the roadmap for policy development and policy implementation in the fields of measuring educational quality and incentive structures; (2) recommendations concerning the design and implementation in 2009 of the new Incentive Programme for Teaching Quality. For this new programme, the Steering Group established six principles for the design and implementation for the system and also made specific recommendations for implementation in 2009 and beyond to ensure that this can be a stepping stone towards establishing an accountability system in Mexico. These principles tackle the importance of the participation of states in developing and piloting dimensions relative to the quality of teaching. They also address the need to achieve a greater understanding of what motivates teachers in order to foster an attractive work environment and facilitate career perspectives. This will contribute, for example, to better compliance with their professional needs to improve. It will also provide them with the necessary tools to assess their own professional development, and to work towards good performance and relative improvement of teachers and students, net of socio-economic factors.

The OECD Steering Group on evaluation and incentives policies in Mexico is composed by international experts from the policymaking area, international cooperation and academia. It is composed as follows:

1. Carlos Mancera (Chair)
2. José Luis Gaviria
3. Jorge Juárez Barba
4. Enrique Roca Cobo
5. Halsey Rogers
6. Lucrecia Santibáñez
7. Susan Sclafani
8. Margarita Zorrilla
