Pablo Antolin is Principal Economist at the Private Pension Unit of the OECD Financial Affairs Division. He is currently working on four projects: (1) a project on annuities and the payout phase; (2) a project on the impact of longevity risk and other risks (e.g. investment, inflation, interest rate, human capital) on retirement income adequacy; (3) a project on the design of investment strategies for default funds in defined contribution pension plans; and (4) a joint project with the World Bank on comparing the financial performance of private pension funds across countries.

In the past, he has worked on the impact of ageing populations on the economy and on public finances. He has produced several studies examining options available to reform pension systems in several OECD countries, including public pensions. Previously, he worked at the IMF and at the OECD Economic Department. He has published journal articles on ageing issues as well as labour market issues. Mr. Antolín has a PhD in Economics from the University of Oxford and an undergraduate degree in Economics from the University of Alicante (Spain).
