

Ken HEYDON

Ken Heydon is an economic consultant, a Visiting Fellow at the London School of Economics, and a Visiting Lecturer at Sciences-Po in Paris. Until 2006, he was Deputy Director for Trade at the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development. Before his last appointment at the OECD, Ken Heydon was Deputy Director-General of the Office of National Assessments in Canberra, providing advice to the Prime Minister on international economic, political and strategic developments. He has extensive experience in economic policy and trade advisory positions in the Australian government and has been closely involved in various GATT Rounds and Australia's bilateral and regional trade and economic relations. Ken Heydon has a BSc.Econ. from the London School of Economics and an M.Econ from the Australian National University.