

Jeffrey D. Lewis is Senior Adviser and Head of the International Policy & Partnerships Group (IPPG) in the Poverty Reduction and Economic Management (PREM) Network. IPPG is responsible for analytic policy work in PREM areas of focus, including global economic issues and international aid response to MDG goals, and serves as the focal point for coordination with the IMF, collaboration with OECD, WTO, and UN economic agencies, and engagement with key shareholders (G7/G8, G20, G24, etc.)

He previously worked as Adviser in the Office of the Chief Economist and Senior Vice President, where he provided support on areas including global trends, trade, international finance, migration, aid, and climate change; Manager of the International Finance team in the Development Prospects Group, which is responsible for monitoring global financial market trends and their implications for developing countries; Economic Adviser in the Trade Department on issues of global trade policy, regionalism, and country trade and macro policy; and as Lead Economist for South Africa, including analysis of South African growth prospects, the macro impact of HIV/AIDS, trade reform, and SADC regional integration. He has also worked on issues of country risk and creditworthiness in the Bank's Financial Policy and Risk Management Department, and as a country economist on Indonesia, Fiji, and Papua New Guinea.

Prior to joining the Bank in 1993, he was an Institute Associate at the Harvard Institute for International Development (HIID) for nine years, including five years as a resident advisor on macro, fiscal, trade, and debt issues in the Indonesian Ministry of Finance. He has consulted in Colombia, Venezuela, Bangladesh, Turkey, Uganda, and Zambia, and has carried out extensive research in areas including economic modeling, exchange rates and trade policy, stabilization and structural adjustment policies in developing economies, and regional trade arrangements.

He has a Ph.D. in economics from Stanford University and a B.A. in economics from Harvard University. Mr. Lewis is a specialist in global aid and financial architecture issues; country trade, exchange rate and macro policies; regionalism; and economic modeling.