

Andrew Burns is a Lead Economist and Economic Advisor with the Development Prospects Group at the World Bank. He is the main author of the World Bank's flagship publication Global Economic Prospects, which last year explored the importance of the diffusion of technology in developing countries. He has also been a principal contributor to past editions of the World Bank's Global Development Finance. Before joining the World Bank, Mr. Burns worked with the OECD where he was Head of Desk for the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland and France. Prior to joining the OECD, Mr. Burns worked with the Economic Council of Canada in Ottawa. Mr. Burns holds degrees from the University of Manitoba and McGill University in Canada. He is currently leading a team analyzing the impacts of the financial crisis and the recent commodity boom for developing countries.