PARTNERSHIPS FOR LABOUR MARKET INCLUSION

Study Visit for Local Development Practitioners to Territorial Employment Pacts in Austria
28 – 30 September 2009, Innsbruck, Austria

Draft Agenda

The issue

One of the aims of our societies is to ensure that all members participate in economic activity and thus share the fruits of growth. Active participation in the labour market is considered as an important factor of accomplishment and self-esteem, and it contributes to social cohesion and stability. However, in many countries, regions and localities, the conditions for labour market inclusion for all are not met, despite implementation of policy reforms and other initiatives. Marginalisation affects certain groups of the population and certain geographical areas (e.g. minorities and people with a migration background, non- or less educated persons, school drop-outs, urban areas where these groups concentrate), and this problem appears to transcend the various phases of the business cycle.

The issues of exclusion and marginalisation are complex and unlikely to disappear in the foreseeable future. The global economic crisis has increased the likelihood that more people will enter the vicious circle of low income and labour market exclusion.

Partnerships and labour market inclusion

Inclusion in the labour market is a cross-cutting issue, touching upon the responsibility of institutions in charge of social policies, employment, education, integration, housing, transport, and economic development. The effective collaboration of these institutions is thus required. Many countries have now started to set up, favour or use already existing partnerships to focus on social integration by combining resources and knowledge of different stakeholders.

The Austrian Territorial Employment Pacts (TEPs) have been invited by the Austrian Ministry of Labour, Social Inclusion and Consumer Protection to establish measures for active labour market integration of marginalised groups. This is done within the framework of the European Social Fund operational programme 2007-2013. The first results are promising, and a second call is being issued for 2010.

The Study Visit

The OECD LEED Forum on Partnerships and Local Governance organises a study visit for a selected group of local development practitioners to review the labour market inclusion experience of Austrian Territorial Employment Pacts (TEPs). The study visit will provide opportunities to meet with people responsible for the TEP co-ordination in Tirol and in Austria, as well as with TEP Tirol partners and project promoters. In particular, the study visit will offer the possibility to:

- Get insights about the TEPs labour market integration strategies and programmes, their rationale, development and how barriers to their effective implementation have been addressed;
- Learn about the organisational and funding structure of Austrian TEPs within the framework of the ESF; and,
- Network with people running local social inclusion projects.

Preliminary programme

Day 1, afternoon

The first afternoon of the study visit, after an introduction of the activities of the OECD LEED Programme and the Forum on Partnerships and Local Governance, is dedicated to a detailed presentation of the Austrian wide public policy support for Territorial Employment Pacts within the framework of the European Social Fund.
