

Becoming an Associate to the Global Project

The Global Project on Measuring the Progress of Societies has been designed to foster the development of sets of key economic, social and environmental indicators and their use to inform and promote evidence-based decision-making, within and across the public, private and citizen sectors.

What does it mean to become an Associate?

Associates are Public and Private, National and International organisations which are interested in contributing to specific activities of the Project and implementing the actions envisaged by the Istanbul Declaration.

As an Associate, your organisation would have a number of benefits. For example, your organisation would:

- be given the possibility to provide comments and make proposals on the direction of the Project and on its deliverables and to discuss key documents about the Project, as they are being drafted, via a “Associates-only” secured space on the Global Project website;
- be informed about all forthcoming events (including the World Forums) in advance of the general public and have priority in attending events where space is limited, taking part in exhibitions and so on;
- receive visibility, with your logo appearing on the Global Project website and promotional material among the list of Associates

Your organisation would also be operationally associated with specific actions that would be undertaken under the aegis of the Global Project and which are important to furthering the Project's mission.

Be involved
