

Improving School Leadership

Copenhagen, April 14-15, 2008

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

IMPROVING SCHOOL LEADERSHIP

Bojesen at Axelborg Conference Centre, Vesterbrogade 4A, Copenhagen, Denmark

14-15 April 2008

FINAL PROGRAMME

The international conference on Improving School Leadership is the final conference of the OECD activity of the same name. It is organised jointly by the Danish Ministry of Education and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). The conference is designed to bring together policy makers, scholars, educational administrators and international organisations to discuss options to improve school leadership policy for enhanced school outcomes.

The OECD will present the final report Improving School Leadership: Policy and Practice and participants will share experiences on policy development, discuss emerging policy issues, and consider how policy makers can respond to these challenges. The overall objective of the conference is to respond to the following question: How can the school leadership agenda be carried forward?

Conference format

The format of the conference is designed to foster opportunities for discussion among participants, whom we encourage to take an active role. Prof. Tony Mackay, Director of the Centre for Strategic Educational Thinking (CSET), Melbourne, Australia will facilitate to this end and lead us through the following sessions:

Setting the stage

This introductory session is aimed at welcoming participants and providing the rationale for school leadership policy action. It will begin with a welcome speech by the Danish Minister of Education and the OECD Deputy Secretary-General. This will be followed by a keynote presentation by Prof. Andrew Hargreaves and an OECD presentation of the comparative report.

The policy levers for change

This session aims to stimulate participants to discuss the four key policy levers the OECD report is recommending to improve leadership practice. In the workshops, the OECD will briefly present the policy recommendations and countries will discuss them in relation to their national approaches. We encourage you to prepare to contribute actively to the different workshops and to share your country's experiences during the sessions. A special session on Tuesday morning will focus on Scandinavian approaches to school leadership.

From policy to practice

The final session focuses on how country policy will be able to act on these recommendations. Speakers will look at the challenges of policy formulation and implementation and discuss ways to make school leadership policy work in practice. To this end, experts in the field of school leadership will wrap up the conclusions of the parallel workshops and the OECD will present its publication Improving School Leadership: Case Studies and Concepts on Systemic Action. The session will conclude with a discussion between the Danish Minister of Education, experts and practitioners on how the school leadership agenda can be carried forward.
