

DOUGLAS LIPPOLDT is a senior economist and policy analyst with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development in Paris (1992 - present). He is the acting head of the Development Division in the OECD Trade and Agriculture Directorate, with a portfolio of issues that includes trade and innovation, among other topics. His previous assignment was in the OECD Science, Technology and Industry Directorate covered innovation, industry and entrepreneurship issues, with particular emphasis on innovation in the software sector and non-technological innovation. In recent years, he has published a number of papers, briefs and articles on intellectual property and development issues. Prior to coming to the OECD, he worked 10 years for the US Government as an international economist on trade policy, labour market and economic development issues. Currently, he has an academic affiliation with the Groupe d'Économie Mondiale at Sciences Po in Paris.