ANNEX: Revised

DRAFT FOR DISCUSSION

Proposal on an international database on recognised higher education institutions

Initiatives of listing recognised higher education institutions

National initiatives

Research on the Internet has so far identified 68 countries which have some kind of database/list of recognised higher education institutions freely available on the Internet. There are most likely several other national initiatives which have not yet been included in this overview¹.

The information available varies to a great extent:

1) Coverage:

Some bodies list exclusively 'public universities'². Others may include private universities (including those of foreign origins³), other types of higher education, further education, vocational education and training, etc. In terms of the distance education, there may be a separate listing for such courses⁴. In addition, it is often the case that the listing is not only of institutions but also of programmes or courses⁵.

2) Design:

51 countries have a listing that carries the name of the institution, address/tel/fax, and email/webpage address, etc., while 17 countries have a database with search engine listing/database.

3) Terminology:

The terminologies differ often across countries. The terms used are 'registered', 'accredited' or ¹ e.g. Tanzania has a list of all the universities, university colleges and non-university level institutions recognized by the Higher Education Accreditation Council and Government of Tanzania. It is however not yet available on the internet.

² e.g. China, Bulgaria.

³ e.g. Egypt, Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, South Africa and United States.

⁴ e.g. India, Singapore, and Malaysia.

⁵ e.g. Brazil, New Zealand, and Singapore.

4) Responsible Body(ies):

The body(ies) in charge of publishing such listings differ from a government, a quasi-governmental organisation, and to a non-governmental organisation. In addition, those who 'publish' such listing may not always be the same body(ies) that 'recognise/accredit' the institutions. Also, in some countries, there are more than two bodies which publish such listings⁶.

International initiatives

At the international level, the International Association of Universities (IAU) has established a CD-ROM with information on about 17,000 nationally "recognised" higher education institutions from about 180 countries collected from national sources. This is the most comprehensive list of higher education institutions globally. It is available for a fee in the form of a CD-ROM. It does often not include recognised "untraditional higher education institutions" such as for-profit companies, foreign providers or virtual universities.

The ENIC/NARIC Network has a web-page (<http://www.enic-naric.net/index.asp?display=About>) with information about recognition of higher education institutions in 53 countries in the enlarged Europe, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and United States. The information is classified by country with a link to national sources of "Lists of Recognised Higher Education Institutions". Of the 53 countries listed, 42 countries have established some kind of list of "recognised higher education institutions"⁷.

The IAU CD-ROM and the national lists of recognised higher education institutions available at the ENIC/NARIC web-page are often not containing the same type of information. The following example illustrates this. The IAU CD-ROM lists respectively 1841, 263 and 88 recognised higher education institutions in the United States, United Kingdom and Australia while the respective national databases list 6 973, 408, and 205 higher education institutions.

⁶ e.g. Belarus, Norway, Estonia, Lithuania, Malaysia, and Singapore.

⁷ These countries are Albania, Armenia, Australia, Belarus, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, Croatia, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, FYROM Macedonia, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, The Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Russia, San Marino, Serbia Montenegro, Slovak Republic, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, Ukraine, United Kingdom, and United States.

Armenia

The ENIC/NARIC Network refers Ministry of Education and Science, Armenia, for recognised higher education institution.

URL: <http://www.edu.am/> (Available only in Armenian as of May 21, 2004.)

Argentina

Secretaria de Politicas Universitarias, Ministerio de Education, Ciencia y Tecnologia, has an online listing of higher education institutions as well as database a search engine,.

URL:

http://www.me.gov.ar/spu/Servicios/Autoridades_Universitarias/autoridades_universitarias.html

(Listing)

<http://ses.siu.edu.ar/ulinea/universidades1.asp> (With a search engine)

What information?

The listing shows⁸:

- 38 national universities;
- 41 private universities;
- 6 state university institutes;
- 12 private university Institutes;
- 1 provincial university;
- 1 external university; and
- 1 international university

How to search?

The search can be made by either the type of the institution (private institute, university institute, external university, etc.) or the name of the institution.

The result shows:

- Name of the institution,
- Address,
- Locality, Province,
- Phone/fax, email, website, followed by
- Details of the faculties of the institution.

⁸ As of May 21, 2004, the listing does not correspond to the database with the search engine in terms of the number of institutions.

Austria

Austria NARIC has compiled a list of of all Austrian institutions of post-secondary education (recognised as well as recognisable).

URL: http://www.bmbwk.gv.at/medienpool/10238/naric_post_bild03.pdf

The listing shows:

Australia

Australian Qualifications Framework (AQF) Register has an online database of institutions that are all registered in the AQF with a listing.

URL: <http://www.aqf.edu.au/register.htm#state>

What information?

It lists 205 institutions. They include both public and private. They are:

- 44 universities and other self-accrediting higher education institutions, and
- 161 non self-accrediting higher education institutions that are accredited by 8 state/territory accrediting agencies – Australian Capital Territory (10), Commonwealth (currently none), New South Wales (36), Northern Territory (not uploaded online), Queensland (22), South Australia (21), Tasmania (6), Victoria (57), Western Australia (9).

Overseas higher education institutions and their AQF-comparable approved qualifications are planned to be listed online.

How to search?

For the moment, there does not exist a collective list of all the institutions/programmes that are accredited by the different quality assurance and accreditation institutions/agencies. To find a list of institutions/programs that are accredited within a self-accrediting institution or by an accrediting agency, you must go to its website.

The website may be an online listing or search register, depending on an agency. The listing or search result shows:

- Name of the institution;
- Address, contact person, phone, fax, email, web address;
- Programme (degree, course title);
- Accreditation/Approval period.

UK

The UK Department of Education and Skills (DfES) has an online database of recognized institutions with a listing (with a drop-down menu)³⁶.

URL: <http://www.dfes.gov.uk/recognisedukdegrees/annex4.shtml#>

What information?

The database lists 408 institutions. They include:

- 108 universities as 'recognised bodies';
- 300 colleges and other institutions as 'listed bodies'³⁷.

The database does not include overseas providers.

How to search?

There is no search engine. The 'recognised bodies' are listed with an alphabetical 'drop-down' menu. The 'listed bodies' are listed either with an alphabetical drop-down menu, or with a drop-down menu grouped by a recognised body.

³⁶ All UK universities and some higher education colleges are the 'recognised bodies'. The 'recognised bodies' have the power to award its own degrees: they are granted degree awarding powers by either a Royal Charter or an Act of Parliament. Other institutions, which do not have the power to award their own degrees but may provide courses leading to a degree of a recognized body, are known as 'listed bodies'.

³⁷ Currently, of the 108 universities, 11 recognised bodies are engaged in degree-granting of the listed bodies.
