

Tae Yong JUNG, Ph.D., Senior Climate Change Specialist, The Asian Development Bank (ADB), Philippines

His research areas are energy and environmental modeling, clean energy financing. He has special interest in economic development and environmental concerns. He was one of lead authors of IPCC Special Report on Emission Scenario (SRES). He has been a visiting fellow at Pacific Northwest National Laboratory of USA, Economic Research Institute of Kyoto University, and National Institute for Environmental Studies of Japan. He was in Korea Energy Economics Institute. He joined Institute for Global Environmental Strategies (IGES), Japan in 1999, where he was a project leader for the Climate Policy Project. Before he joined the ADB, he worked at the World Bank where he was involved in the World Bank's activity on 'clean energy and development: towards an investment framework'. Dr. Jung received his Ph.D. in Economics from Rutgers University.