Objectives
It is increasingly recognised that within the right policy setting foreign direct investment (FDI) can be a powerful engine for sustainable growth and integration of nations at various levels of development into the world economy. Governments in all continents now compete actively for FDI. The international community has intensified efforts to assist less developed countries in this process. Hence, as we enter into the 21st century, despite the anticipated decline in FDI flows in 2001, opportunities for reaping the full benefits of inward direct investment and achieving a better world for all remain high in the long run. Today FDI is needed more than ever to achieve sustainable development and poverty reduction.

At the same time, this prospect poses new challenges. Host and home governments need to move beyond traditional liberal FDI policy to embrace and develop a broader set of policies for an enabling environment for investment: respect for workers and environmental rights, competition, taxation, financial markets, trade, corporate governance, public administration, and other public policy goals. Building the capacity to formulate and implement these policies has become an equally important and pressing challenge. How and in what ways can policy frameworks be developed to ensure that multinational enterprises contribute to development goals and capacity building also remains a priority issue on the international agenda.

Structure
The conference will address these challenges with a view to contributing to improved common understanding on the conditions for increasing benefits of FDI. It will lay the groundwork for further co-operation and experience sharing between OECD Member countries, non-Members, private sector practitioners, trade unions, NGOs and other main partners. It also aims to contribute inputs into the UN International Conference on Financing for Development in March 2002, Mexico.

This conference represents the first event of the Global Forum on International Investment (GFII) aimed at fostering an open and inclusive dialogue on emerging investment issues among the international investment policy community and other main stakeholders. The GFII is one of eight "Global Forums" created last year within the framework of the Center for Co-operation with Non-Members in order to deepen and extend relations with a larger number of non-OECD economies in fields where the OECD has particular expertise and global dialogue is important.

Participation
Participants will include government officials from OECD and non-Member economies in charge of investment policy, promotion and development issues. World Bank Group, IMF, UNCTAD, UNIDO, UNECE, Inter-American Development Bank, Asian Development Bank, and European Commission are among the multilateral/regional organisation partners invited. There will be active presence from business, labour and civil society organisations.

Venue and Hotel
The conference will be held at: Hotel Camino Real Av. Mariano Escobedo 700 11590 México D.F., México, Tel: (52) 52 63 88 88 Fax: (52) 52 63 88 89 E-mail: reservas@crmexico.com.mx

All participants are expected to book directly with the hotel. NEW APPROACHES AND OPPORTUNITIES ON FDI AND DEVELOPMENT

10:15-13:00

Chair: Mr. William Witherell, Director, Financial, Fiscal and Enterprise Affairs, OECD

Rapporteur: Mr. Mehmet Ögütcü, OECD

Over the past decade, the FDI landscape has been considerably transformed, presenting government and company policymakers with new challenges at the global and local levels. The FDI scene is set to be considerably different in the next decades from how it looks today: “new e-technologies”; “mergers and acquisitions”; “trade and investment”, “regional integration”; “investment agreement discussions”; “socially responsible investment”; “what does all this mean for FDI and development”?

BENEFITS OF FDI FOR DEVELOPMENT: COUNTRY EXPERIENCES

15:00-18:30

Chair: Mr. Neil Roger, Deputy Director, Private Sector Advisory Services and Foreign Investment Advisory Services, World Bank

Rapporteur: Mr. Jan Schuijer, OECD

Growth is fuelled by investment -- domestic and foreign. And demand for investment exceeds supply. Countries are competing for more and better “quality” FDI. Both economic theory and case studies suggest that FDI has a beneficial impact on developing host countries, but there may also be missed opportunities to reap the full benefits of FDI and potential risks that should be carefully assessed: “what empirical evidence are there for FDI benefits”, “how can negative aspects be minimised”, “why are some countries doing better than others”, “China’s success story and the post-WTO accession outlook”, “what are the social implications of FDI flows to Malaysia?”.

Presentations (15 minutes each)

- The experience of Mexico in investment liberalisation and capturing benefits of FDI: What worked and what next?, Mr. Luis de la Calle, Vice-Minister of Economy, Mexico
- Mrs. Melek Us, Director-General of Foreign Investment Department, Turkey, “Removing Administrative Barriers to FDI: Particular Case of Turkey”.
- FDI and its impact on employment and social policies: The Malaysian experience, Mr. Govindasamy Rajasekaran, Secretary-General of the Malaysian Trade Union Confederation.

PANEL B

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY: BEYOND TRADITIONAL FDI POLICIES

Chair: Mr. Wesley Scholz, Director, Investment Affairs, State Department, United States (and Vice-Chairman of the Committee on International Investment and Multinational Enterprises)

Rapporteur: Mr. Rogelio Arellano, Mexican Delegation to the OECD
The new trends and developments require going beyond traditional FDI policies and taking a broader perspective as to the interaction of related policy tools. What are the most critical policy areas, which need to be addressed by host and home countries? How should they interplay in order to better respond to new challenges?

9:00-13:00

Chair: Mr. Carlos Garcia Fernandez, Director-General of Foreign Investment, Ministry of Economy, Mexico

Rapporteur: Mr. William Nicol, OECD
Establishing a favorable environment for investment requires development of institutional and human resource capacities in order to respond positively to policy and incentive structures. This makes a big difference in a country’s ability to benefit from the positive aspects of FDI: “how to develop human resources for good public governance practices”, “how institutions and policies should respond to investors’ concerns and vice versa”, “how combating bribery and corruption can affect investment”, “how FDI can support financial sector development”, “how multilateral co-operation and standard-setting systems best accompany domestic efforts”.

Rapporteur: Ms. France Benois, OECD
Business adherence to principles of corporate responsibility is seen as contributing towards more sustainable development for the host countries. Increasingly this is also seen as being in the interest of the enterprises themselves: “in what ways can business codes of conduct contribute to development and the expectations of shareholders”, “are there risks for corporate responsibility to weaken competitiveness”, “what does it mean for developing countries?”.
