

Euro-Arab Institute Foundation
for Education and Training

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) would like to announce that the Euro Arab Institute Foundation for Education and Training (INSTEA) is granting scholarships for the Master in Public Governance in the Arab World to officials and middle-rank servants from Arab public administrations who wish to strengthen their skills and gain practical experience in their key areas of work.

This Master course is due to start on 10 October 2011 and will provide public officials from National and Regional administration offices with strategic guidance and practical tools to enhance current government policies.

This course, which is coordinated by INSTEA and the University of Granada, will be entirely online to best meet the needs and professional schedules of the participants, and features two intensive in the field study courses: “Current Challenges in the Arab World’s Change Process”, to be held in Granada and “Public Administration Reform in Arab Countries”, to be held in Tunis, organised by the MENA-OECD Regional Centre of Expertise for Regulatory Quality.

To reinforce the general management and leadership skills acquired by officials in this program, a 3-day executive education courses program have been organized in collaboration with IESE - Harvard in Madrid and INSEAD in Abu Dhabi. These courses play an important role in preparing officials for a successful career in the highest levels of management, and will be taught on-campus in Madrid and Abu Dhabi. These are optional courses and are not a requirement for receiving the master degree.

The Master Degree is divided into six Advanced Diplomas and a Final Project, all of which must be completed in order to receive the master degree. A feature of this program is that the ADs do not need to be completed consecutively, and students can select a term to take each AD.

The OECD and the Euro-Arab Institute Foundation will be granting 17 scholarships (2 full grants and 15 partial (50%) grants) for this Master course. The courses will be taught entirely in English. Deadline for scholarship applications is on 28 July 2011.

Interested applicants should fill out the application form and send a letter of motivation in English requesting the grant and a letter of nomination in English from the highest public administration authority possible to mastergov@instea.org before 22 July 2011.

For further information please visit <http://governance.instea.org>