The issue of sustainability of health spending across Europe is pressing. In most countries of Eastern Europe health expenditures are rising whilst the revenue base for sustaining health spending is declining due to decrease in the population in the workforce. Health systems in CESEE countries share many common institutional characteristics. Almost all of the countries in the region have some type of social insurance system, where responsibility is split between Ministries of Health, Health Insurance Funds and Ministries of Finance. This presents a complex challenge of co-ordination in order to achieve sustainability, but also an opportunity for countries with similar challenges and systems to compare experiences and to learn from one another.

In order to maximize impact and exploit synergies, the OECD and the WHO Regional Office for Europe joined forces for this meeting of on the Financial Sustainability of Health Systems. This allows bringing together health and finance officials as well as key international organisations. Our technical meeting is held in conjunction with OECD’s Senior Budget Officials (SBO) Central, Eastern, and South-Eastern European Network meeting, and on the afternoon of 29 June, participants of the two meetings will join for a plenary session to share findings and to discuss the role of the Budget Office in maintaining the fiscal sustainability of health systems.
