What we do for women entrepreneurs

The OECD's LEED Committee has been working for 20 years on the close relationship between entrepreneurship and local development, and it has played a pioneering role in the issue of women's entrepreneurship. The LEED Programme supports women entrepreneurship as a key for creating economic wealth, jobs, social change and territorial value. It proposes a systematic approach to assessing and enforcing the role of women entrepreneurs in local development policies.

Dina Ionescu, LEED Administrator is responsible for this activity since 1998 and Antonella Noya, LEED Administrator will be in charge starting with 2004.

Women Entrepreneurship and Local Development

The aims of the activity "The dynamic role of women entrepreneurs in local development" are to propose to national and sub-national authorities a comprehensive assessment of women entrepreneurship in their country or region, to propose concrete recommendations for adapted policies maximising the growth potential of women-owned businesses and offer international expertise and experience exchange.

Women entrepreneurship is key in local development policies because it means empowering women, creating new job opportunities, establishing local partnerships among public, private and non-governmental actors, introducing innovative financing schemes, supporting education and training schemes as well as networks that add value to the territory. Cities and regions increasingly adopt and implement policies supporting women entrepreneurship.

The topics of Women Entrepreneurship

The topics analysed within the framework of the study of the dynamic role of women entrepreneurs in local development are:

- quantitative and qualitative statistics at sub national level;
- gender mainstreaming in territorial development schemes;
- links between female employment and female entrepreneurship in a given area;
- availability of proximity education, training, mentoring schemes;
- availability of structures supporting women entrepreneurs such as professional networks, female
- business incubators, housing, child care and elderly care structures;

- proximity financing programmes from traditional banks, micro-credits organizations, public funds
- community and social development (socially innovative activities and funding sources, partnerships)
- women entrepreneurs needs in specific areas (rural areas, difficult urban neighbourhoods, regeneration or old industrial areas)
- specific groups of women facing particular problems in given areas (minorities, indigenous populations, migrants, young and elderly women)
- specific country needs: transition economies, Northern Africa

LEED's work on Women entrepreneurship over the 13 past years

- In 1990, LEED released a publication entitled Enterprising Women. This was the starting point of a series of international events and activities undertaken by LEED on this issue. In 1994, the conference on "Women and the City" that was held in Paris benefited from LEED's input.
- From 1999, the theme of women's entrepreneurship was subsequently raised regularly at annual CEI forums and numerous conferences, which also enabled the constitution of an international network of experts and qualified institutions on the subject.
- The Conference on "Women's Entrepreneurship: East-West Co-operation" in Brijuni, Croatia was held in 1999. This major event was co-organised by LEED, along with the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) and the Central European Initiative (CEI). In parallel, from 1997 to 2000 the Working Party on SMEs and Entrepreneurship held a first Conference on Women Entrepreneurs in SMEs in 1997, followed by a second one in December 2000 to promote women's entrepreneurship. The LEED Programme was actively involved in those events, which yielded a set of recommendations for policymakers.
- In 2002, the conference "Maillage" organised by the "Dirigeantes" Association in co-operation with the OECD and UNESCO was held in Paris.
- 2003 and onwards: Work at the OECD is continuing in preparation for the Ministerial conference on SMEs to be held in June 2004 in Istanbul, with the co-operation of LEED.
