OECD LEED forum on local governance

Why looking at partnerships?

The area-based partnership is a tool to improve governance. It seeks to:

- Improve policy co-ordination and adaptation to local conditions
- Lead to better utilisation and targeting of programmes
- Integrate civil society's concerns into strategic planning exercises through more widespread participatory democracy
- Stimulate corporate involvement in local projects
- Promote greater satisfaction with public policy

(OECD Local Partnerships for better Governance, 2001)

Which partnerships?

The Trento Centre in the framework of the Forum on Partnerships and Local Governance, created in 2004, in co-operation with the Austrian Federal Ministry of Economy and Labour and supported by the EC, is considering partnerships which are:

- MULTI-LEVEL: Partnerships decision-making involves stakeholders from supranational, national, regional and local levels
- MULTI-SECTORAL: Multi-sectoral (or cross-sectoral) partnerships involve stakeholders representing various economic sectors/branches, governmental and non-governmental actors seeking to improve the coordination between labour market, education, economic and social policies at local and regional level
- MULTI-DIMENSIONAL: Partnerships apply integrated approaches to multi-dimensional problems
