BIGGEST OIL PRODUCER
IN THE WORLD
Nigeria is the most populous country in Africa, the second biggest economy, the third largest military power and the biggest oil producer (10th oil producer in the world). Its seven most populous cities each house more than one million people, and about one out of two West Africans is from Nigeria. As the largest military power in the region, Nigeria played a central role in the ECOWAS efforts to end the civil wars in Liberia and Sierra Leone. ECOWAS headquarters are based in Abuja.

A large part of West African economic activity is concentrated in Nigeria. Cross-border activities closely link southern Niger to the Hausa economy; Benin and Togo benefit from the major economic activity between Lagos and Ibadan. Cameroon and Chad’s economies are also strongly oriented towards the Nigerian market. Nigeria has an important economic influence on the entire region, including the franc zone where it has increasingly been making investments (particularly in the banking sector). The stock exchange in Lagos is the only large-scale financial trading centre in the region. Nigeria is also the largest cereal and meat producer in West Africa. Agriculture accounts for almost one third of GDP and about two-thirds of employment, but oil remains the key economic sector. While the country possesses great industrial potential, Nigeria remains highly dependent on oil exports and struggles to develop sufficient refining and production capacities to meet its domestic energy needs.

Since its return to democracy in 1999, Nigeria has enjoyed 13 years of uninterrupted democratic rule. However, security concerns are on the rise, in particular since the emergence of the radical Islamist sect Boko Haram which has killed more than 1 000 people since 2009. Moreover, Movement for the Emancipation of the Niger Delta (MEND) militants have abandoned a three-year-old ceasefire. The successful political transition from a northern to a southern leader in April 2011 proved that “a Nigerian, irrespective of where he or she comes from, who is popular with Nigerians generally has a good chance of winning the presidency” (Ambassador Bristol). North-South antagonism will continue to play a visible role in Nigerian politics.

OVERVIEW

NIGERIA IS THE MOST POPULOUS COUNTRY IN AFRICA, the second biggest economy, the third largest military power and the biggest oil producer (10th oil producer in the world). Its seven most populous cities each house more than one million people, and about one out of two West Africans is from Nigeria. As the largest military power in the region, Nigeria played a central role in the ECOWAS efforts to end the civil wars in Liberia and Sierra Leone. ECOWAS headquarters are based in Abuja.

A large part of WEST AFRICAN ECONOMIC ACTIVITY is concentrated in Nigeria. Cross-border activities closely link southern Niger to the Hausa economy; Benin and Togo benefit from the major economic activity between Lagos and Ibadan. Cameroon and Chad’s economies are also strongly oriented towards the Nigerian market. Nigeria has an important economic influence on the entire region, including the franc zone where it has increasingly been making investments (particularly in the banking sector). The stock exchange in Lagos is the only large-scale financial trading centre in the region. Nigeria is also the largest cereal and meat producer in West Africa. Agriculture accounts for almost one third of GDP and about two-thirds of employment, but oil remains the key economic sector. While the country possesses great industrial potential, Nigeria remains highly dependent on oil exports and struggles to develop sufficient refining and production capacities to meet its domestic energy needs.

SINCE ITS RETURN TO DEMOCRACY IN 1999, Nigeria has enjoyed 13 years of uninterrupted democratic rule. However, security concerns are on the rise, in particular since the emergence of the radical Islamist sect Boko Haram which has killed more than 1 000 people since 2009.
