Objective: to provide an overview of the OECD’s evidence-based approach to measuring government support and an opportunity to discuss, in a non-negotiating format, the growing concerns about practices which may be distorting trade and resulting in a less-than-level playing field.

Participants: senior level policy-makers from OECD and partner countries; private sector representatives.

Format: panels will be moderated Davos-style, to promote interactive exchange. Maximum time will also be given to discussion amongst Delegates and exchanges from the floor. The event will be conducted under the Chatham House Rule.

Day 1 (23 October 2019)

Session 1: What is the evidence on government support?

Session 2: Addressing market distortions to industrial goods.

15:30  Panel IV
Moderator: Ken Ash, OECD Director for Trade and Agriculture
Panelists:
- Denis Redonnet, Director, DG Trade, European Commission.
- Roy Malmrose, Director, USTR, United States.
- Junichiro Kuroda, Director-General, METI, Japan.

Based on the discussion in the previous sessions, this session will explore approaches to addressing key areas for strengthening disciplines on industrial support. The session will be led by countries and include a focus on:
- Selected key issues such as, for example, the role of state influence and state enterprises; subsidies to the cost of capital (debt and equity); support along the value chain; the importance of transparency
- Suggested approaches to enhanced disciplines to level the playing field (e.g., in FTAs or at WTO) such as prohibiting the most distorting subsidy types, reinstating the WTO “dark amber” category of subsidies, state-enterprise specific disciplines, preferential input pricing, and increased transparency.

Floor open for discussion
