

About the authors

Matt Andrews is an Associate Professor at the Harvard Kennedy School where he works on issues to do with reform and development.

Tim Auracher is a Senior Advisor on Good Governance at GIZ HQ. For the past 13 years, he has worked in several African and South-East Asian countries as project manager and technical advisor, mainly on (fiscal-) decentralisation and civil society participation.

Séverine Bellina is Director of the Institute for Research and Debate on Governance. She holds a doctorate in public administration and is a specialist on issues of public governance, legitimacy and development co-operation. She has worked on governance issues at the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Development and the UN Development Program. She has published several books and articles.

David Booth – Based at ODI in London, David Booth has led research on developmental regimes in Africa (<http://www.institutions-africa.org/>). He co-authored with Diana Cammack Governance for Development in Africa (Zed Books, 2013).

Chiara Bronchi is a Lead Public Sector and Governance Specialist at the World Bank. She leads a team providing assistance in the Africa Region on Public Sector Management, Public Finance and Judiciary reforms as well as e-Government and Open government reforms. Dr Bronchi holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Bologna, and an MA in Economics from University College of London.

Richard Butterworth is a Senior Governance Adviser in DFID Bangladesh, leading a diverse governance portfolio. His eleven years with DFID have also taken him to Nigeria and Burma/Myanmar.

Thomas Carothers, Vice-President for studies at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, is co-author (with Diane de Gramont) of Development Aid Confronts Politics: The Almost Revolution (Carnegie 2013).

James Deane is the Director of Policy and Learning at BBC Media Action. Has worked on with media and development for more than 30 years, formerly executive director of the Panos Institute, London. Has advised OECD DAC GovNet on media and governance issues over several years.

Sara Fyson leads work on public sector institutions within the Development Directorate of the OECD. She also manages the secretariat of the Effective Institutions Platform, a multi-stakeholder network of over 60 countries and organisations supporting international commitments on public sector institutions. She was previously at the world Bank covering issues related to public finance and public procurement. She has degrees from the London School of Economics and Oxford.

Eduardo González Cauhapé-Cazaux is the lead advisor on governance programmes at the Spanish Development Cooperation Office in Guatemala. Before that, he was Governance Advisor at the OECD. Previously, he worked for the Spanish Development Agency, with the United Nations in Latin America and with Intermon-Oxfam in Barcelona. He studied law at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid and has a master's degree in Criminal Policy Models from the University of Paris.

Jörg-Werner Haas is a free-lance Senior Consultant. His professional experience in the past 40 years spans from academic research and technical consultancies mainly in the field of urban development and good governance to management positions such as GIZ – Country Director and Director of the Sector Department for State and Democracy at GIZ HQ.

Volker Hauck is the head of the programme on Conflict, Security and Resilience at the European Centre for Development Policy Management (ECDPM). He has worked on European international co-operation, institutional development and capacity development support. Volker is a member of ECDPM's senior management team.

Wil Hout is Professor of Governance and International Political Economy at the International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam. His latest book (with Jane Hutchison, Caroline Hughes and Richard Robison) is Political Economy and the Aid Industry in Asia, Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan, 2014.

David Hudson is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Political Science, University College London and the Deputy Director of the Developmental Leadership Program.

Jörn Grävingholt is Senior Researcher at the German Development Institute/Deutsches Institut für Entwicklungspolitik (DIE). His fields of study include state fragility, peace and statebuilding support, democracy promotion and the dynamics of non-democratic regimes.

Marco Larizza is a Senior Public Sector Specialist in the Governance Global Practice of the World Bank. Marco received his PhD and MA in Political Science from the University of Essex, UK, and his MA in Development Economics from the University of Bologna, Italy.

Nick Manning retired as Head of Governance and Public Sector Management at the World Bank in December 2013. He led the 2012 development of the Bank's approach to Public Sector Management.

Heather Marquette is the Director of the Developmental Leadership Program (www.dlprog.org) as well as Academic Director of the GSDRC (www.gsdr.org), and is based at the University of Birmingham, UK.

Lant Pritchett is the Professor of the Practice of International Development at the Harvard Kennedy School and previously worked for the World Bank, including resident assignments in operations in India and Indonesia.

Salimah Samji manages CID's Building State Capability Program at Harvard university. She has over twelve years of development experience and has worked for the World Bank, Google.org and Hewlett Foundation.

Paul Smoke is Professor and Director of International Programs at New York University's Wagner Graduate School of Public Service. He works on public sector reform and decentralisation in developing countries.

Ousmane Sy is Vice-President of the Institute for Research and Debate on Governance. He is Director of the Local Institute (Bamako), and holds a doctorate in economics and social development. In 2000 he entered government as the Minister of Regional and Local Government, he was tasked with organising the 2002 presidential elections. Interim Secretary General of the Presidency during the 2012-2014 transition, he was appointed Minister of Decentralisation and Urbanisation from 2014 to 2015 in the government of President Ibrahim Boubacar Keita.

Fletcher Tembo is Director for the Mwananchi Social Accountability Research, Learning and Consulting firm registered in the UK and Malawi; and Research Associate at the Overseas Development Institute (ODI).

Sue Unsworth was DFID's Chief Governance Adviser from 2003 to 2004 and led their early work on Drivers of Change. She has subsequently supported a range of donor agencies in implementing more politically informed approaches to development assistance.

Alan Whaites leads the OECD's Accountable and Effective Institutions Team. Previously Head of Profession for Governance at DFID. Also was Director for International Policy and Advocacy for a large NGO.

Graham Teskey is Principal Governance Specialist for the Department of Foreign Affairs in Canberra. Previously Graham had positions with DFID and the World Bank. He began his career as an economist with appointments in Fiji, Vanuatu and Tanzania. Before joining DFID in 1993 Graham taught development studies at the University of Bradford. He has degrees in economics, planning and business administration.

Frauke de Weijer is a senior policy analyst in the field of governance, conflict and fragility, and a programme associate at the European Center for Development Policy Management (ECDPM).

Michael Woolcock is Lead Social Development Specialist in the World Bank's Development Research Group. He is also a (part-time) Lecturer in Public Policy at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government.