

OECD / South Africa Workshop on A New Measurement Framework for Financing the SDGs Total Official Support for Sustainable Development Pretoria, 7 October 2019

Background

In September 2015, the world's leaders agreed on the most ambitious development agenda ever designed, the 2030 Agenda, comprised of 17 goals and 169 targets. Earlier that year, at the Third International Conference on Financing for Development, the international community committed to hold "open, inclusive and transparent discussions" on a new measure of Total Official Support for Sustainable Development (TOSSD)<sup>1</sup> that aims to capture all official and officially supported resources targeting the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). The concept of TOSSD emerged from the recognition of gaps in current international statistics on development finance, which do not take into account all actors (e.g. Brazil, China, India, South Africa), nor all flows and instruments available for sustainable development.

The new statistical framework of TOSSD<sup>2</sup> aims to measure resources in support of sustainable development provided by both bilateral and multilateral organisations. It is comprised of two pillars:

- Pillar I, which tracks all cross-border resource flows to developing countries.
- Pillar II, which tracks resources in support of International Public Goods and development enablers, or that aim to address global challenges.

TOSSD will include:

- Activities that support sustainable development. In practice, this means that only activities with a direct link to an SDG target and where no substantial detrimental effect is anticipated on one or more of the other targets will be included in the framework.
- Both concessional and non-concessional resources.
- Finance flows from a wide range of providers, including South-South co-operation providers.
- Finance flows to a large group of beneficiary countries, including developing countries and, potentially, high-income countries in vulnerable situations.

In 2017, an International Task Force<sup>3</sup> was set up to develop the TOSSD measure. The Task Force membership, comprised of about 25 experts, strikes a balance between developing and developed countries and between statisticians and development policy officials. The Task Force also includes a number of observers (Brazil and Chinese Think Tank CAITEC). South Africa, as co-chair of the TOSSD Task Force has a very strong role in the Task Force.

In this context, the OECD, which acts as the Task Force Secretariat, and South Africa are organising together a workshop in the margins of the OECD week in Pretoria. The main objectives of the event are to:

- Inform relevant South African stakeholders about the new TOSSD statistical measurement framework;
- Increase knowledge and awareness on the main concepts and measurement methods of TOSSD among the South African administration; and
- Exchange views on how to increase knowledge of TOSSD more broadly in the African continent.
