BACKGROUND INFORMATION

Investing in transport infrastructure is a key component of economic recovery and resilience worldwide. Despite some progress, the needs of developing countries are significant and growing. Investment must accelerate in order to future-proof infrastructure, make it more inclusive and environmentally sustainable, and to nurture an economic recovery based on inclusiveness and sustainability.

Development finance institutions (DFIs) and multilateral development banks (MDBs) play a key role in mobilising investments to close infrastructure gaps in developing countries. They are also undertaking a number of new initiatives to ensure effective project preparation and implementation.

This roundtable, organised in collaboration with the G20 Development Working Group (DWG), lines up representatives from DFIs and MDBs to take stock of what is being done and to discuss the role of the G20 Principles for Quality Infrastructure Investment (QII) in this respect.

The roundtable will follow a Davos-style format with a debate among the panellists and open discussion with all participants. To register for the meeting, please click here for in-person participation and here for online participation.
