

In cooperation with

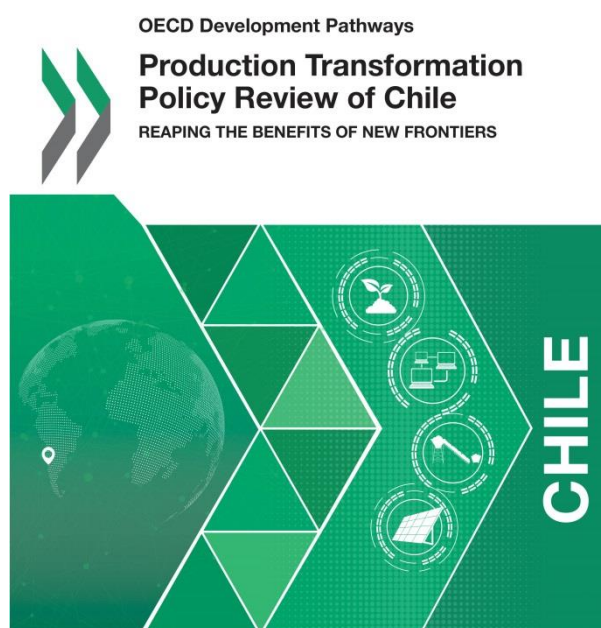

LAUNCH of OECD PRODUCTION TRANSFORMATION POLICY REVIEW OF CHILE

9th of January 2018

9:00-12:30

Hotel Intercontinental, Santiago, Chile

The Production Transformation Policy Review (PTPR) of Chile reviews the national agenda for growth and economic transformation and it identifies game changers for future reforms.

It clarifies how the ongoing global and technological changes open a window of opportunity for Chile to transform its economy and overcome its structural weaknesses. It assesses the current governance, policies and tools for economic transformation, including the new forms of public-private partnership that the country has put in place to reap the benefit of new frontiers.

The PTPR of Chile calls for an “update” of the Chilean model to continue succeeding. The process involved extensive consultations with multiple stakeholders. It benefited from peer review mechanisms through the participation of peers from Sweden, Emilia Romagna (Italy) and Germany and through a Peer Learning Group that steered the PTPR process in the framework of the OECD Initiative for Policy Dialogue on GVCs, Production Transformation and Development.
