

The models used for the calculation of taxes and benefits are written in STATA®, a statistical analysis program. The programs are complex and their proper operation requires a minimum degree of familiarity with both STATA® and the tax-benefit systems operating in the countries of interest. While we welcome feedback and corrections, the OECD is unable to offer user support. Users of the programs who wish to contact us with corrections or suggestions for future modelling innovations should contact us at Tax-Benefit.Models@oecd.org.

Terms of Use

Results obtained from the OECD tax-benefit models, as well as any errors in their use and interpretation, are the sole responsibility of the user, not of the OECD. The OECD is unable to provide user support. Users are required to refer to the discussion in the Benefits and Wages publication of the limitations to the model. The models are made available for research use only. They may not be copied otherwise, republished, lent, posted on servers, transmitted or redistributed for commercial purposes or for compensation of any kind without prior written permission from the OECD (rights@oecd.org). Use of the models must be acknowledged in results derived directly or indirectly from these models. The acknowledgement must include a reference to the website www.oecd.org/els/social/workincentives as well as the disclaimer “Results obtained from the OECD tax-benefit models, as well as any errors in their use and interpretation, are the sole responsibility of the user, not of the OECD.”