

Aline Pennisi

Central Budget Authority, Ministry of Economy and Finance
Italy

At the Central Budget Authority, Ministry of Economy and Finance – Italy since 2008, Aline Pennisi is currently in charge of a unit responsible for the analysis and evaluation of public expenditure. By education a statistician and by profession a public policy analyst, she is experienced in economic analysis and research in the field of public finance, in reviewing and shaping budget governance procedures, spending reviews, and performance budgeting. Her unit is responsible, among others, for producing Italy’s gender budget. She actively promotes budget transparency initiatives both at the national and international level and currently chairs the OECD Senior Budget Officials’ Performance & Results Network.

Before joining the Central Budget Authority, she was member of the Public Investment Evaluation Unit of the Department for Development Policies and previously worked for several years on the development and harmonization of statistics and institutional strengthening of national authorities, mainly in Northern Africa and the Middle East. Several of her articles on topics related to public finance, education and electoral studies are published in national and international journals. She is member of the Advisory Committee of one of Italy’s major open government initiatives, OpenCoesione.