Issues for discussion

- Are the architectural principles discussed in the book those a modern public financial management system should have to be manage public resources? What are we missing?
- What are the priorities looking forward?
- How do we ensure broader public administration and management reforms are closely coordinated with ongoing PFM reforms (e.g., compact and six pack)?
- Most importantly, how do we avoid past implementation gaps?
- How do we measure real success, thus avoiding ticking boxes exercises?
