

OECD Innovative Citizen Participation Network Meeting

29 January 2020
8.30 – 17.45

People's History Museum

New Ct St, M3 3ER,
Manchester

The OECD Innovative Citizen Participation Network brings together democratically and civically minded individuals and organisations who are already ideating, prototyping, and iterating a future, open democracy.

The inputs provided at our first Network meeting in June 2019 aided us to shape the focus of our research. With the help of numerous Network members, we have been collecting and validating data, and drafting a report that explores in-depth the use of deliberative processes for public decision-making, due to be published in June 2020.

At this meeting, we want to share with you the preliminary findings, gather your inputs, identify different ways to disseminate the research, and brainstorm how we can build on this report in ways that would be useful for you.

MEETING OBJECTIVES

- To build and strengthen relationships between Network members and civil servants
- To learn about one another's work
- To provide inputs and feedback to the OECD's forthcoming report on deliberative processes & institutions
- To identify dissemination avenues and further uses of the data collected for the study
- To explore different routes to institutionalisation
- To brainstorm on how the OECD can and should build on this report
- To brainstorm new topics to explore under the wider umbrella of innovative citizen participation
- To enable new collaborations between Network members
