

Carlos Alvarado Quesada

Carlos Alvarado Quesada is the actual Minister of Labor and Social Security of Costa Rica. He studied journalism at the University of Costa Rica, holds a Masters Degree in Political Science from the same university and has a Masters Degree in Development Studies from the University of Sussex in England.

He has served as Executive Chairman of the Joint Social Welfare Institute (IMAS) and Minister of Human Development and Social Inclusion, where he led the creation and implementation of the National Strategy for Poverty Reduction.

Alvarado is an expert in communication, public policy and public-private partnerships with 5 years of experience in political communication and parliamentary advisory. He has taught communication at the School of Social Science of the University of Costa Rica and the Latin University of Costa Rica. Author of three books of fiction and several award winning short stories.