Launch Conference of the Third Edition of the World Observatory on Subnational Government Finance and Investment

■ About the World Observatory on Subnational Government Finance and Investment

The World Observatory on Subnational Government Finance and Investment (SNG-WOFI) is a joint endeavour led by the OECD and United Cities and Local Governments (UCLG). The goal of the Observatory is to increase knowledge and promote dialogue on multi-level governance and subnational finance around the world, by collecting and analysing standardised quantitative data and qualitative information. It also helps monitor the implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals and other global development agendas, such as the Addis-Ababa Action Agenda, the Paris Agreement, the Sendai Framework or the New Urban Agenda.

More specifically, the SNG-WOFI has the following four main objectives:

- To bridge the fiscal data gap and facilitate access to standardised, reliable, transparent and comparable data and information on subnational government structure, finance and investment. It also aims to define and share common methodological approaches, tools and indicators.
- To support policy-making at all levels of government on multi-level governance and subnational finance reforms. In particular, it aims to identify the challenges faced by subnational governments in terms of capacity and financing. The ultimate goal is to help enhance multi-level governance and decentralisation frameworks, particularly fiscal ones.
- To serve as a capacity-building tool on subnational governance and finance at the international, national and subnational levels.
- To support international dialogue and facilitate the exchange of experiences, peer learning and constructive discussions between international, national and local stakeholders, and their financial partners.

After two previous editions, in 2016 and 2019 respectively, the SNG-WOFI has become the largest international knowledge repository on subnational government structure and finance ever produced. It provides systematised information on decentralisation processes, territorial reforms, subnational government powers and responsibilities, fiscal decentralisation reforms, and fiscal rules around the world, and covers dozens of indicators on subnational expenditure, investment, revenue and debt.

■ About the Third Edition of the SNG-WOFI

This conference marks the launch of the third edition. This 2022 edition includes data from 135 countries, covering almost 90% of the world surface area, 93% of the world population and 94% of global GDP.

The conference will bring together national and subnational governments, international organisations and stakeholders from around the world involved in this wide-ranging project, to present the key findings of the new edition and to discuss current challenges related to subnational finance and multi-level governance, in light of new data and analysis.

After the opening remarks, the session will include a keynote presentation of the main results of the third edition, followed by a high-level panel discussion of the main findings and challenges ahead. Then three roundtables will discuss the resilience of subnational finances in the face of crises, including the COVID-19 crisis, the war and energy crisis, the territorial dimension of recovery plans, the strengthening of property taxes as a means to consolidate the financial base of subnational governments, and the access of subnational governments to external financing for infrastructure investment.

During the event, the OECD and UCLG will launch the synthesis report and country profiles as well as the new on-line interactive web platform (www.sng-wofi.org), which provides access to the updated online fiscal database, the 135 country profiles and an interactive visualisation tool that allows country comparisons.
