

Frederic Wallet
Researcher, INRA

Frederic Wallet is PhD in economics. Researcher at INRA, he has been managing the PSDR program for over 10 years, one of the main interdisciplinary and collaborative research projects devoted to rural development in France. He is also co-responsible for the Proximités research team at Paris-Saclay University, and a visiting professor at several French universities. Author of six books and many articles on the dynamics of development in rural areas, his work currently focuses on three questions: specificities of innovation processes in low density regions, initiatives in favour of the reterritorialization of agriculture and food, and the place of commons in territorial dynamics.
