

Rebecca Winthrop

Senior Fellow, Brookings Institution (United States)

Rebecca Winthrop is a senior fellow and co-director of the Center for Universal Education at the Brookings Institution. Her research focuses on education globally, with special attention to the skills young people need to thrive in work, life, and as constructive citizens. Dr. Winthrop works to promote quality and relevant education, including exploring how education innovations can leapfrog progress, particularly for the most marginalized children and youth. She advises governments, international institutions, foundations, civil society organizations, and corporations on education issues. She currently serves as a board member and advisor for a number of global education organizations and lectures at Georgetown University. She has served as the chair of the UN Secretary General's Global Education First Initiative's Technical Advisory Group helping to frame an education vision that focuses on access, quality, and global citizenship. Winthrop has authored numerous articles, reports, books, and book chapters, including most recently Leapfrogging Inequality: Remaking Education to Help Young People Thrive. She was educated at Columbia University, Teachers College (Ph.D.), Columbia University, School of International and Public Affairs (MA), and Swarthmore College, (BA).
