

OECD YOUTH WEEK 2021

Prepared for the future?

Investing in Youth – High-level Policy Dialogue on Employment and Social Policy for Youth

Tuesday 21st September 2021, 14:00 – 16:00 CEST

Young people have been hard hit by the wide reaching labour market and social impacts of the COVID-19 crisis. Youth unemployment has increased considerably and many young people are suffering from financial insecurity, housing instability and mental distress. The recent OECD Risk that Matter survey shows that two in three young people think the government should be doing more to support them.

This high-level policy dialogue session on employment and social policy will be opened by Deputy-Secretary General Ulrik Knudsen, followed by a discussion between Ministers and high-level government representatives on policy measures that countries have been taking during this crisis to support young people. Panellists will also discuss how countries are looking to continue, adapt, and potentially scale up their interventions to support the welfare and employment prospects of young people as we recover from the COVID-19 crisis.
